If you are typing corrective drills on one or several letters of the alphabet, you will type five perfect lines of each line—not necessarily in succession, but in total. Begin a new line immediately upon making an error. If you are to review the entire keyboard, you will type three perfect lines of the first two lines of each drill. If additional drills are necessary, you will type three perfect lines of the final two lines of each drill.

Accuracy Study 9/ Spacing Drill

Purpose: To improve accuracy in spacing between words and punctuation marks.

Features: These drills are comprised of exercises in which it will be necessary to space after left- or right-hand strokes. Some of the drills require spacing after left-hand strokes, while others require spacing after right-hand strokes, and still other drills are a combination of the two. To facilitate identifying each type, each drill is labeled so that you can work on your particular spacing problem.
